correct business principles, and its greatest enemy is the demagogue who misleads it under the guise of an assumed gush of and position in his business. We read

daily observation of all intelligent eyes that a man who is diligent in business than that, as a rule, it is in the power of shall stand among men of influence and for a few years, willing to deny himself incentives that the Author of the Uni-In the matter of expenditures, willing to be temperate and upright in his manner world, which something if prudently husbanded is bound to grow in value and law, as it were, flows away from those who have not carned it. Fortunes are like the clouds that constantly absorb the moisture of the earth and redistribute it in the shape of rain.

The great underlying fundamental trouble with most all men is that they are not willing to comply with the conditions prescribed by the Almighty as preliminaries to the acquisition of a start in life. It is the very fewest num ber of men who are willing to deny their passions and appetites. All that they the country, and support, in addition, all the schools and many of the charitable institutions of the land. It was estimated in 1873 that $700,000,000 were spent, at retail alone, for liquors, and that the loss in wages and time among employers and employes amounted to $300,000,000 more. And yet strong drink is only one of the ways in which men who labor waste their means. Solomon says that the man who loves "oil and wine" shall not be rich, meaning thereby that the man who lave "oil and wine" shall not be rich, meaning thereby that the man who is given to indulgence, and who cannot for the sake of the future forego indulgence, will not accombulate much in life. This, when the real trouble comes to be examined, is at the bottom of almost every man's financial disficulties. They who will not save something when they can, and put it by for a season of hardship, like that through which we are now passing, will always experience peculiar deprivations. There is no patent plan by which this result can be avoided. All theorizing that overlooks as a prime necessity the practice of industry, frugality and temperance on the part of every man who exros money by his work, is simply a delusion, and amounts to nothing worthy of serious consideration.

There are in the city of Wheeling a large number of people who a few years ago were employed in various industries, and who have achieved a competence and some few of them wealth. There is one f and who have achieved a competence and some few of them wealth. There is one every prominent manufacturing establishment in our midst, every original stockholder of which was an employe of the concern. They came here from Pittaburgh, where they had all worked for others for several years, and where, by the practice of the virtues we have named, they had each saved some money ahead. The amounts were small, but they were sufficient by the aid of the industry, skill, frugality and integrity with which they were accompanied, to insure a grand success in a series of years. They resolved to pay small salaries, to watch carefully over their expenses, to take an individual interest in the common object before them, and to never put on the market any work that would injure their reputation. To these principles they religiously devoted themselves, and it followed, as a law of the universe, that success crowned their efforts. These men had all seen something of stylen is their time and they all and dool to be safely used for any purpose where its product is subjected to the blacksmith's product is subjected to the blacksmith's more into the product is subjected to the blacksmith's efforts. These men had all seen something of strikes in their time, and they had all come to know that strikes were at best but a poor relisace for permanent relief from the difficulties that beset working men. They saw, as one of them has said in our hearing, that the best reliance was to "salt down" some of their carnings and thus be ready, when an opportunity occurred, for an investment in connection with their labor. Had these men been satisfied to go on earning wages forever, trusting to good times and good luck to ng from one year to another, and carelessly spent their wages for "beer and billiards," and in pleasuring around the country during parts of the year, they would have remained just as dependent as they were in their early years, and would never have accomplished any of the results which they have achieved for themselves and others. Why did not many more of their friends and acquaintances (fellow-workingmen,) follow their exam-

Regulation of Internal Commerce.

Step by step the Government is advancing in accordance with a growing public demand, to assume a partial control of the railroads. A volume containing statistics relating to the internal commerce of the country, for the year ending June 30, 1876, has just been issued from the Bureau of Statistics, and the light it throws upon the subject will strengthen the tendency to State interference. Few people would imagine that the value of our railroads is $3,600,000,000, while that of the vessels engaged in our foreign trade, foreign and American vessels included, is only $220,000,000. There is an the very face of this fact a danger to the country of permitting so wast an amount of capital such as near the country of permitting so wast an amount of capital such is not an assert as a liventage to be permitting so vast an amount of capital fellow-workingmen,) follow their example? Simply for the reason we have given, that most men will not deny themselves of what they esteem a present pleasure for a greater result in the distant and uncertain future. The motto of the aucient Sadducees is really the motto of most people in this world, albeit they would not admit it, viz—letus live while

We do live; let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die; let the future take care of itself.

We do not, in presenting this view of the labor question, ignore any other view of it that involves duties and obligations on the part of employers. We do do not acquit employers. We do not the part of employers. We do not the part of employers. We do not the part of employers. We do not foreign commerce we will the realizon days and inmense interests whith the railroads, and immense interests whith the railroads, and immense interests of the not acquit employers.
